

Policy & Advocacy Internship Immigrant Food

Immigrant Food is seeking an intern to support its policy and advocacy capacities. The ideal candidate will work at a dynamic startup environment with exposure to many aspects of a new social enterprise. The ideal candidate is interested in social corporate responsibility and public policy. Interest in journalism? A lot of your work will be working on an editorial team to help create our monthly Think Table! A passion for NGO work? You'll be supporting the team in its advocacy arm, communication with our 5 local immigrant-service NGO partners!

The unpaid internship is for the Spring 2022 semester, with strong preference to extend into the Summer semester. This is an in-person internship.

Your benefits include:

- A small stipend for transportation
- Gym access in the Washington Post building
- Free lunch on your work days
- Immigrant Food merchandise package after your first week
- 20% off for all Immigrant Food locations for the duration of your internship

What you'll do:

The Think Table

- Assist in editorial planning for monthly issues of "The Think Table", a micro-digital think tank/magazine
- Research + present the Think Table topic at weekly meetings
- Create infographics and short columns for The Think Table page
- Assist with interview preparation of leading national immigration experts

NGO Outreach

- Assist in work with partner NGOs, including but not limited to quarterly reports and reviews.
- Research for the restaurant's engagement menu (activism page).

You'll work report to our Chief Operating Officer but will work closely with other members of the team. As part of a startup environment, you'll have the opportunity to work on a diverse portfolio of activities!

Immigrant Food is Washington D.C.'s first cause-casual restaurant, with a mission to celebrate, advocate, and educate on behalf of immigrants.

<https://immigrantfood.com> @immigrantfood #UnitedAtTheTable